ANOTHER JAIL BREAKER MAKES GOOD ESCAPE

New Haven, Aug. 20.—These are days when High Sheriff Hugo has his work cut out for him. Another of the county jail took leg bail today. He used the plan worked by two a few nights ago, of hiding behind a lumber pile and then making a dash for the gate at a favorable moment. Alfaro Lapio was the lucky man. He was serving time for a theft, year and a half on each of two charges, having worked the "handkerchief game" with two others and getting $350 from a fellow countryman. Lapio only was caught. He belonged in New York.

CALLS SPECIAL ELECTION.

Governor Sets October 6 For Selection of Guilford Judge.

Hartford, Aug. 20.—Governor Baldwin has ordered a special election for probate judge for the district of Guilford to be held October 6. Judge Charles H. Post, the present incumbent, will reach the age of seventy years, the legal limit, on January 5, 1914, and will be automatically retired from office on that date. It is rather unusual for the governor to be forced to call a special election to meet a situation of this character. Guilford people say that it was well known among the voters at the time of the last election that Judge Post would not be able to serve his full term. The latter is himself quite willing to step out of office.

NOONE HEADS COMMISSION.

Senator Succeeds Warner on State Rivers and Harbor Board.

Hartford, Aug. 20.—At a meeting of the state rivers and harbor commission in the Capitol yesterday, attended by Governor Baldwin and the full board, former State Senator Thomas F. Noone of Rockville was chosen president to succeed Edward H. Warner, resigned. The commission had before it a written statement from the New London Northern and the Central Vermont railways agreeing to give to the state a lease for 80 years of the land at New London harbor which the commission needs for dock purposes. It carries with it the privilege of purchase at the expiration of the lease. No action was taken on the matter, however, and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the president.

GIRL VICTIM KNOWN HERE

Miss Cassidy, Lost in Alaska Wreck, Nurse in Torrington Epidemic.

Torrington, Aug. 20.—Miss Annie L. Cassidy, whose name appears in the list of missing passengers of the steamship State of California, which was wrecked in Gambier Bay, ninety miles south of Juneau, Alaska, last Sunday morning, was well known here, for her work as a nurse during the typhoid epidemic which visited Torrington in 1911. She came to Torrington at that time from Springfield, Mass. Subsequently she went to Vancouver, and a few days ago friends here received a letter from her saying that with a party of friends she was on the way to Seattle, Wash., to take ship for Alaska for her vacation.

COMPETITION AT THE COUNTY FAIRS

There has been much complaint of recent years that the county fairs are not so educational as formerly. Uncle Reuben, getting up in his old age, frivolously follows the races and watches baseball, when he ought to be inspecting the cattle sheds. There is one sure way to make an agricultural fair truly educational. That is to rouse the spirit of rivalry. The farmer likes his holiday as well as anyone. But if he sees a chance to slip on a blue ribbon over on his neighbor, the grand stand will lose its interest. Recalling the basic appeal of the spirit of competition, many county fairs conduct contests in handling draft animals, correct judging of stock, ploughing, etc. A fair that has these features never lacks the educational element. The ambitious and successful farmers are found watching these rivalries with keen and critical eyes, rather than ringing in or getting their fortunes told.

SUFFS PUT UNDER BAN IN HARTFORD

Militant Women in Wagon, Ordered to Station, Takes Their Own Time

Hartford, Aug. 20.—The career of three suffragists, two of the English militant variety, was rudely interrupted on Capitol avenue, near the Underwood Typewriter factory, yesterday afternoon, when Policeman John F. Flynn stopped a wagon containing the campaigners, and ordered them to drive to police headquarters at once, where he told them to secure permission from Chief Farrell before being permitted to carry on their advertising on the streets of Hartford.

Flynn preceded the caravan to headquarters, where he remained a half hour awaiting the arrival of suffragists. The women failed to appear and Patrolman Flynn was ordered back on his beat by Chief Farrell, who said he would dispose of the case himself.

The three women in the wagon stopped by Flynn were Miss Elizabeth Freeman of New York, and Miss Elsie McKenzie and Miss Vera Wentworth, both of England, and, according to Miss Wentworth's own admission, "militant suffragists of the deepest hue."

The party left New York August 6, bound for all the principal cities of New England. After touring this part of the country it is their announced intention to visit different parts of the east and west in the interests of their cause. The route thus far has included stops at Stamford, Norwalk, Bridgeport, Milford, New Haven, Wallingford, Meriden, New Britain, Hartford. They had been in this city only a short time when stopped by the vigilant policeman.

Their vehicle is a wagon of roomy interior containing a small reed organ, which is constantly played while being drawn through the streets. Suffragist banners are displayed and streamers are given away to all who will take them.

Chief Farrell said that the women will not be permitted and cannot be allowed by the city ordinance to ride in the wagon through the streets.

"The wagon and its advertising features come under the head of advertising on the streets and will not be allowed," said the chief.

The women drove into town with a wagon covered with signs advertising the "cause." When they finally visited Chief of Police Farrell later in the day he informed them that they could not drive their campaign wagon through the city streets unless the signs were removed or covered up.

They complied with the requirement by covering the signs, and last night it was a much less conspicuous wagon in which they drove to an open space behind the city hall.

They remained there last night. They will remain here another day.

AUTOS MAY ENTER STATE FAIR GROUND THIS YEAR

The thousands of automobilists in the state who have planned to attend the great state fair at Charter Oak, Conn., will be disappointed to learn that the state fair, September 1, and continuing for the balance of the week, will be pleased to learn that their cars will be admitted to the park this year, an excellent plan for parking them having been provided by the management, and there will be no charge. This is a departure from the custom of previous years of compelling motorists to park their cars outside the gates.

The building for the housing of the exhibits, the new cattle sheds and dairy hall have been finished, while the new midway is ready for the arrival of the show, many of which will come direct from Coney Island. Arrangements have been completed for the removal of some of the most successful attractions at the Coney Island grounds. Next week will see the arrival of some of the stars of the trotting and pacing world at the Charter Oak track, for their preliminary training for the championship stake events at the famous track.

One of the startling attractions which patrons of the Connecticut Fair may have an opportunity of witnessing is a polo match played by some of the championship mounts which were in the recent international match between England and America. A regulation polo field has been evolved, and Major Louis E. Stoddard of New Haven, one of the stars of the recent cup match, will be asked to arrange a match for a substantial trophy which the association will offer.

Definite announcement has been made by the New Haven road that all trains passing the Connecticut Fair grounds to the Highland division, Fair week, will stop.

In view of the well known fact that Tammany always uses political contributions for legitimate expenditures like hiring halls, printing, advertising, etc., it does seem as if Gov. Sulzer ought to be ashamed.

It is said that the express companies may transport garden vegetables direct from the farmers to the consumer. It would be such a popular move that the report seems inherently improbable.

Monday morning the auto of a well known physician was seen speeding up Taunton hills by early risers, who wondered what accident or case in that direction occasioned the hurry-call. Coming back the doctor was decelerated and asked to explain. Smilingly the doctor produced from the bottom of the car a half-bushel basket of mushrooms for the promotion of citizen's inspection and then silently went on. Curiosity was fully gratified for once, but a sensation was spoiled.

Mushrooms should be picked with the day on them.
